

WHAT IS MUTUAL MINISTRY?

A WAY OF BEING CHURCH TOGETHER

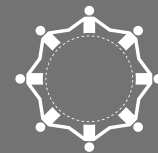

An ecclesiology in which:

we see ourselves and the church as Christ's agents in the world;

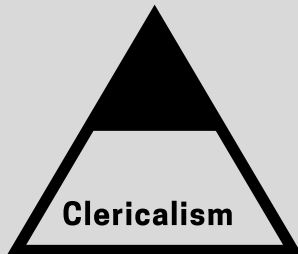

we affirm that each of us is a minister empowered with gifts the Holy Spirit has given;

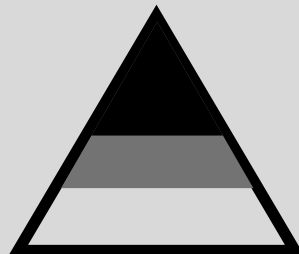

and we, together, are a community of ministers, not a community gathered around a minister (Wes Frensdorf).

LET'S EXPLORE THREE MODELS...

The priest is "THE Minister." All others are passive consumers of ministry congregating around the priest.

The priest is still the primary Minister, but receives assistance from a select group of (hand-picked) laity who serve in lay leadership positions. All others are passive consumers of ministry.

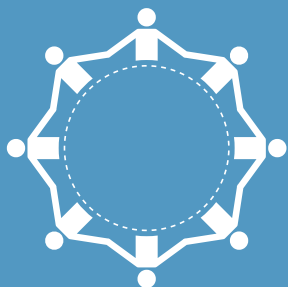

All ministry is Christ's; every baptized person is an active participant, each according to their gifts. The main arena for ministry is daily life.

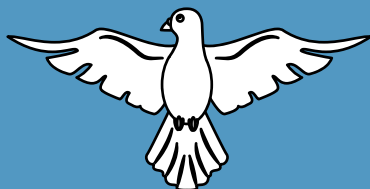

DID YOU KNOW?

Over the past 30 years, this practice of ministry has also been known as: Total Ministry, Shared Ministry, Baptismal Ministry, Collaborative Ministry, & Ministry Development.

MUTUAL MINISTRY IS...

A ministry paradigm where leadership is shared according to the gifts God has provided. It is...

- Systematically and intentionally collaborative;
- Focused on building ministering communities, not communities headed by a minister;
- Invitational to/for all;
- Rooted in local community – proximity and relationship cultivate invitation;
- Constantly Discerning;
- A Celebration of the small with attention to the margins;
- Empowering/ Equipping the natural curiosities and callings that arise;
- Flexible – ongoing discernment to be the church with the gifts and callings already there; and
- Serious attention to the “ministry of all people of God” (including those who don’t even know that they are people of God).
